1.1.1	Intro	1.1 - 4	nova (new); corpora (body); tempora (times); mundi (world); ad mea (to my); of shapes transformde to bodies straunge, I purpose to entreat; wodrous feate	Ovid begins the Metamorphoses by invoking the gods. He asks them to inspire his work, which opens with the creation of the world and continues on to the present day, and is about the transformation of bodies.

1.2 Creation 1.568 - 587

	Chaos	1.5 - 20	Prose
1.2.1	Chaos	1.5 - 20

	Separation of Elements	1.21 - 31	Prose
1.2.2		1.21 - 31	ended by a god and a greater order of nature; divided transparent heavens from the dense air; disentangled elements, fixed them in separate spaces in harmonious peace. weightless fire forms the heavens, darted upwards to make its home in the furthest heights. Next came air in lightness and place. Earth, heavier than either of these, drew down the largest elements, and was compressed by its own weight. The surrounding water took up the last space and enclosed the solid world.  god, or kindlier nature, settled all argument; liberation, so things evolved, and out of blind confusion found each its place, bound in eternal order  a god, and nature—now benign—ended this strife; unraveling these things from their blind heap; earth, more dense, attracted elements, more gross; flowing water filled the final space holding the world in its embrace	After this short prayer, Ovid describes the birth of the world. A creator separated earth from heaven, sea from land, and lighter air from heavier air.

	Arrangement of Elements	1.32 - 75	Prose
1.2.3		1.32 - 75

	Creation	1.76 - 88	Prose
1.2.4	Creation	1.76 - 88		He then made beings to inhabit these new spaces: Gods and stars filled the heavens, fish the seas, beasts the land, and birds the air. Man was created to rule the world.

1.3 Four Ages 1.89 - 150

	Gold	Prose
1.3.1	Gold		The age of gold was a time of trust, moral goodness, and fruitfulness.

	Silver	Prose
1.3.2	Silver		In the age of silver, people had to work for a living.

	Bronz	Prose
1.3.3	Bronze		The age of bronze saw the first wars, but some semblance of morality persisted.

	Iron	Prose
1.3.4	Iron		In the age of iron, however, nothing is sacred. Even family ties lead to bloodshed.

1.4 Giants 1.151 - 162

	Struggle of Giants	1.151 - 162	Prose
1.4.1	Struggle of Giants	1.151 - 162	arduus aether (lofty air); ragnum caeleste (celestial kingdom); pater omnipotens (almighty father); hominum (human); sanguin (blood);

1.5 Council 1.163 - 252

	Council of the Gods	1.163 - 252	Prose
--	---------------------	-------------	-------	--

1.5.1	Email		In the iron age, the gods appear and witness human impiety. In particular, Jupiter visits the house of the Lycaon, who treats Jupiter with the greatest disrespect, even trying to murder him in his sleep. Outraged, Jupiter decides to punish humanity with a flood.
1.5.2	LYCAON

1.6 Flood 1.253 - 312

	Flood	1.253 - 312	Prose
1.6.1	Flood	1.253 - 312

1.7 Deucalion 1.313 - 415

	Deucalion & Pyrrha	1.313 - 415	Prose
1.7.1	Deucalion & Pyrrha	1.163 - 252	Because of their piety, Deucalion and Pyrrha survive. No one else does. Themis gives Deucalion and Pyrrha cryptic advice about how to repopulate the earth: They must cover their heads, let their garments loose, and cast the bones of their great mother behind their backs. Initially, Pyrrha is disheartened, because she interprets this advice as sacrilegious. How can she desecrate her mother's bones? Deucalion has a different interpretation. He thinks Themis was referring not to their actual mothers, but to the earth.
1.7.2	Thetis	1.163 - 252
1.7.3	Pyrrha
1.7.4	Man Recreated

1.8.2	Python	1.416 - 451	a snake not known before, a terror to the new race of men. The archer god, with lethal shafts that he had only used before on fleeing red deer and roe deer, with a thousand arrows, almost emptying his quiver, destroyed the creature, the venom running out from its black wounds. Then he founded the sacred Pythonian games, celebrated by contests, named from the serpent he had conquered. There the young winners in boxing, in foot and chariot racing, were honoured with oak wreaths. There was no laurel as yet, so Phoebeus crowned his temples, his handsome curling hair, with leaves of any tree.
